prevalence {#sec2-7} ----- To date, few prevalence studies have been conducted on the prevalence of the C. difficile gene in the community. In one study, first met to assess the prevalence of C. difficile in the United Kingdom, among healthy subjects, ranged from 0% to 3.5%. [@ref16] This study was conducted in the 1980s and has not been revised since that time, although routine testing for toxigenic C. difficile is routine. A study in Brazil, based on samples from healthy patients and food handlers, has shown that 11% of fecal samples were positive for C. difficile [ref17]. Another study in the United Kingdom, conducted among healthy patients, showed a prevalence of 2.5% [ref18]. Similar findings have been observed in other countries: in the Netherlands, from a cohort of patients hospitalized for at least 48 hours, the prevalence of C. difficile was 3.3% [ref19]; in France, based on a random sample of elderly inpatients, C. difficile 2d92ce491b
