Insanity Box The Insanity Box is a design concept that was created by Von Glitschka. In the 1980s, he patented a shock-proof panic box. In an emergency or a crisis situation, the user could pull a cord in his Insanity Box to press a button releasing a "sniper beanbag" which would propel a beanbag up to to shatter a glass window, knock a person unconscious with a concussion or cause a seizure. References Category:Inventions by Michael Von Glitschka[Molecular mechanisms of behavioral sensitization to cocaine in the mouse: particular role of striatal  $\gamma$ -aminobutyric acid type A receptors]. The present study aimed to investigate whether the GABA(A) receptor subunit alpha6 gene (Gabra6) plays a role in the behavioral sensitization to cocaine. A conditioned place preference (CPP) procedure was used in adult male C57Bl/6J mice. The data indicated that the acute intraperitoneal administration of cocaine (5 mg/kg) induced the development of a CPP, which lasted for 3 days. The mice were divided into 3 groups: (1) the saline group, (2) the control group and (3) the experimental group. The experimental group was subjected to a subchronic injection of cocaine (10 mg/kg) for 10 consecutive days. The procedure was conducted 2 h before the behavioral tests. In the saline group, the mice displayed a higher preference for the saline-paired chamber after the conditioning. In contrast, the mice in the control group did not show any preference for the saline-paired chamber. In contrast to the control group, the mice in the experimental group expressed a higher preference for the cocaine-paired chamber. The densities of Gabra6 mRNA in the dorsal striatum and nucleus accumbens of the mice were analyzed. The results showed that the densities of Gabra6 mRNA in the dorsal striatum and nucleus accumbens of the experimental group were significantly increased compared with those of the control group. The densities of Gabra6 mRNA in the dorsal striatum and nucleus accumbens of the experimental group were significantly decreased compared with those of the experimental group. The above results indicate that a subchronic injection of cocaine induces a sensitized response to cocaine-induced conditioned reward. The results also
